After arriving on the Coast in 1699, the French discoverers, Bienville & D'Iberville, explored the area surrounding Biloxi. Trekking inland, they crossed Biloxi Bay into the area that is the current city of D'Iberville. While the land was attractive, that side of the Bay did not warrant an official settlement at that time. Despite having to cross the bay by boat, people throughout the 1700 and 1800's established homesteads on the north shore of Biloxi Bay, and the village that developed was known as Back Bay. In 1901, a wooden pedestrian bridge was built connecting Back Bay to Biloxi. And in 1927, the Biloxi-Back Bay automobile bridge was constructed. Residents of Back Bay chose to incorporate their city as D'Iberville in 1988.

D'Iberville is one of the Coast's fastest growing cities. New subdivisions dot Highways 15 and 67 and a new regional mall, The Promenade, built after Hurricane Katrina, has boosted the city's economy. Along the city's waterfront, a commercial marina and mixed-use development are planned. Also rebuilt was City Hall, a Visitor's Center, and a spacious town green. D'Iberville is the Coast's youngest city in the median age of its residents.
